Oceanside

The quintessential SoCal beach town is welcoming an influx of cool in the form of new boutiques, restaurants, and craft beer hangouts.

By Archana Ram

Flying Pig Pub & Kitchen

Slow-food ethics meets casual pub ambiance at Flying Pig. Check the menu for daily house-made pasta. 626 South Tremont Street

NEW

Barrel Republic

What sets this gastropub apart? A self-pour system with local favorites like Ballast Point, as well as varieties from Colorado and Hawaii. 215 North Coast Highway

Succulent Cafe

This café doubles as a cacti garden with namesake plants in every corner. Grab a tea or espresso—their Mexican mochas are a favorite—and take in the greenery. 322 North Cleveland Street

Urge Gastropub and Whiskey Bank

The second outpost of the Rancho Bernardo-based pub includes craft beer and food, but you'll also find beer cocktails and more than 250 whiskeys. 2002 South Coast Highway

Masters Kitchen and Cocktail

Housed in the 1930s-era Masters Automotive and Machine Shop, the family-owned restaurant offers elevated Americana by chef Christopher Gallo (A.R. Valentien). 208 South Coast Highway

Banana Dang

After a successful run in Puerto Rico, this coffee bar crossed the pond last year to O'side, where they serve espresso drinks, gourmet toasts, smoothies, and yes, banana-flavored options. 115 South Coast Highway

Hello Betty Fish House

Modern, Baja-inspired seafood is on the menu here. Head to the upper deck—now open seven nights a week—for drinks, snacks, and a spectacular view. 211 Mission Avenue

Bagby Beer Company

This beer spot will satisfy the hungry and thirsty alike. Choose from beers like the Belgian-inspired Golden Girl, cocktails, and a menu of sandwiches, tacos, and more. 601 South Coast Highway

Rais Case/Mr. B's/Sing

The trifecta of locally made products—handbags, apothecary items, and planters, respectively—share a venue next to new coffee spot Revolution Roasters. 1834 South Coast Highway

Oceanside Pier

Walk along the nearly 2,000-foot icon for surfer spectating, sunset viewing, and a classic meal at Ruby's Diner. The Strand North and Pier View Way
